BROMPTON BICYCLE SUPPORTS THE EAST COAST GREENWAY

Brompton Bicycle, the esteemed British bicycle maker specializing in practical folding bikes for commuting and transportation, has donated to the East Coast Greenway Alliance (ECGA) a “T-Type” model folding bicycle to promote the establishment of the East Coast Greenway (ECG).

The ECG, conceived in 1991, is a network of multi-use paths spanning the east coast, now 20% complete with over 60 individual paths open for public use. The Greenway serves as a facility for commuting, exercise, transportation, and tourism. Development of the ECG is spearheaded by the ECGA, a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization based in Rhode Island.

Brompton Bicycle, founded by Andrew Ritchie in 1975, is one of the world’s most respected manufacturers of quality bicycles that fold. Brompton’s donation to the ECGA will be used by staff and volunteers to inspect trail and field-check route information along the ECG route from Maine to Florida.

“Sponsorship by Brompton Bicycle is greatly appreciated,” said Karen Votava, ECGA Executive Director. “We share their philosophy of encouraging greater travel independence and healthy activity. A Brompton folding bike makes it easy for us to travel via public transportation to points along the ECG and leave the car in the garage – setting an example for public users of the ECG..”
